

Frequently Asked Questions

- 1. Should I list income that I made last year or that I am currently receiving?*
Please list only income you will receive starting September 1 this year.
- 2. If I do not have income, should I include my parent's income?*
No, you should not include your parent's information. It is alright if you do not have any income.
- 3. Is money that my parents are depositing into my bank account considered income?*
Income is considered anything that you receive consistently. For example, a gift of money given to you by your parents is not income, but a monthly stipend of the same amount would be considered income.
- 4. If my parents pay for school is this considered income?*
Money your parents pay directly to the University, i.e. tuition, housing, etc. is not considered income. However, if they consistently deposit large amounts of money in your personal bank account, it is considered income and should be listed on the Exhibit B form.
- 5. Do my parents have to sign the Exhibit B Form of Income Certification?*
No. You are the only one required to sign the form.
- 6. Do I have to list income from a trust fund?*
If your trust fund money is deposited directly into your bank account, it should be listed on the Exhibit B form.
- 7. Do I have to list all the names of the members of my current family household on the form or should I just list myself?*
You only have to list yourself on the form at this time. In column 1, write your name (no other names please). In column 2, you can write "self."
- 8. If I am not head of household, where do I sign?*
You do not need to sign anything at this time. During check-in you will sign the document in front of a Notary.
